Wireless Age Is Coming British Scientist Claims

LONDON, July 12.—(By Associated Press).—Under the heading, "Coming of the Wireless Age," a British scientist contributes a striking article to a London newspaper, in which he predicts that wireless will be used in the near future for directing ships at sea, train and trolley services, traffic control of the road, fleets of battleships and aircraft. "It will be possible," he says, "to direct the path of everything moving on the surface of the earth, not even excepting human beings, by means of wireless."

The initial step in harnessing this potent and little known force was the establishment some weeks ago of a wireless lighthouse on Inchkeith Island, in the Firth of Forth. By means of this "lighthouse," ships can be directed through the dangerous channels of the Firth by wireless, so that there is no possibility of their running ashore or being wrecked even on the darkest night or in the densest fog.

Steps are being taken in conjunction with the British Board of Trade and the meteorological office, to internationalize wireless direction of ships at sea. At the present moment there is a lighthouse in the Port of London
